On ne compte
pas pour du beurre

A word from the publishers

On ne compte pas pour du beurre (We count for something) is an independant publishing house created in 2020 and based in Strasbourg.

Our publishing house is developing an inclusive editorial approach, committed to producing new, more diverse social representations in children's books that avoid stereotypes.

This political and cultural issue overlaps with that of a demanding editorial proposal, distinguished by a bright and rich graphic identity.

We know that childhood is a unique and precious time in a person's life when each individual forms and projects their identity.

Children's literature, through its characters, gives every child the opportunity to see themselves mirrored or to meet someone new. We want to offer books from an early age in which all forms of diversity coexist simply.
